

Inquiry into School Libraries and Teacher Librarians

Letter of support from the Australian library and information community

We welcome the opportunity to contribute to the Department's Inquiry into School Libraries and Teacher Librarians.

As members, friends and supporters of the Australian Library and Information Association (ALIA), the peak national professional body representing the library and information services sector in Australia, we are committed to promoting the free flow of information and ideas in the interest of all Australians and a thriving culture, economy and democracy.

ALIA works closely with the Australian School Library Association and with the ALIA Schools group to promote the interests of school libraries and teacher librarians.

We strongly support the principle of 'a teacher librarian in every school'.

School library and information programs and services are integral to the mission, objectives, and teaching and learning goals of every school.

As an integral partner in the school's teaching and learning team, the teacher librarian has a role in the planning, implementation and evaluation of education policies, curricula, learning outcomes and programs, with particular reference to the development of research and information literacies.

Teacher librarians support and implement the vision of their school communities through advocating and building effective library and information services and programs that contribute to the development of lifelong learners.

The development of literacy skills is crucial for students' future participation in the Australian economy and society. Teacher librarians are instrumental in supporting this important goal. The Australian Bureau of Statistics' report Adult literacy and life skills survey (ABS 4228.0, 2006), found that slightly less than half of the Australian population, approximately 7 million, failed to achieve the minimum required level or higher in prose and document literacy.

There is much research evidence that students attain higher levels of achievement when there is an adequately resourced school library staffed by a teacher librarian.

Existing research shows that school libraries can have a positive impact, whether measured in terms of reading scores, literacy or learning more generally, on student achievement. There is evidence to show that a strong library program that is adequately staff, resourced and funded can lead to higher student achievement regardless of the socioeconomic or educational levels of the adults in the community.

Lonsdale, M 2003, Impact of school libraries on student achievement: a review of the research, report for the Australian School Library Association, ACER, Camberwell, Vic., p. 27.

Teacher librarians are at the forefront of teaching essential information and digital literacy skills in our schools. The successful implementation and use of the national broadband network depends upon Australians having these skills. The development of information literacy skills -- seeking, evaluating, using and creating information effectively to achieve personal, social, occupational and educational goals – is essential to Australia's long-term economic development.

Teaching young Australians about cybersafety and the important messages about how to stay safe online, particularly with the growth of social networking, is one of the most effective ways of protecting our children. Teacher librarians are key to cybersafety education programs in schools.

We urge the government to recognise the vital role of school libraries and teacher librarians, particularly in the areas of literacy, lifelong learning, cybersafety, information literacy, and digital literacy skills. Adequate funding together with educational and professional development opportunities are essential to achieve the best educational and social outcomes for young Australians.

We urge the government to endorse the principle of ‘a teacher librarian in every school’ and to implement the actions necessary to achieve this.
