What's so Special?

It's a great honour to receive this award. I really appreciate being nominated (by a former mentoree) and even more, receiving the award. I've found that an unexpected spin-off has been the very complimentary things people have said, not just on the night, but in the weeks that followed as news spread. The cards and emails have been a great boon to morale and self-esteem.

As a health librarian, I come from a 'sub-species' of the broader Knowledge and Information Specialists group, but there are many core values, skills, and qualities that unite us in all of the many sectors in which we work as librarians.

A terrific question I was asked in the interview process for this award asked where I saw myself in five years time. This is worth reflection by all of us at any time. I have worked in one position for almost 20 years now and I have not been driven particularly to change jobs as a goal, but I have always tried to stay fresh, open, and reflective in my professional practice. No matter where I work, I hope – no plan! - to avoid negative patterns of thought, to look for opportunities to innovate, to examine the relevance of what I do and be willing to ditch the ineffective, and to enjoy the working relationships with some wonderful colleagues around the country. In short - not so different from so many of my colleagues who I see working in just this way. I feel special because of this award and I think I'm lucky to work with many others who I think are special too.

EdResearch Online

I am keen for more people to know about EdResearch Online at <http://cunningham.acer.edu.au/dbtw-wpd/sample/edresearch.htm>

EdResearch Online is a freely searchable database of 11,227 research documents and articles from the Australian Education Index. 8000 are linked to freely available full text documents. A further 2500 are available for a fee.

EdResearch Online will be of interest to librarians working in educational institutions particularly those with education faculties.

WA Special Librarian of the Year Award

Congratulations to Cheryl Hamill!

As those of you who attended the WA Australian Library Week Launch know, a highlight of this event was the announcement of the winner of the 2002 WA Special Librarian of the Year Award.

Judging by the roar of approval when her name was announced, Cheryl was a popular choice for bestowal of the award.

Cheryl has been an active and longstanding member of both the Library and Health communities in WA, and currently holds the position of Librarian in Charge at the Fremantle Hospital & Health Service.

The award was presented by Deanne Barrett, carrying out her first official duty as a newly elected member of the ALIA Board of Directors. Deanne referred to aspects of Cheryl's career which had contributed to her receiving the award:

"...for her long and consistent contribution to ALIA; for being instrumental in founding the new national ALIA group and email list for "Health Libraries Australia", and for her willingness to impart knowledge, as evidenced by the presentation of conference papers both in library-related subjects, and also on her chosen subject specialty of health."

Cheryl received numerous prizes for her efforts; both an individual and a perpetual trophy, an enormous bunch of flowers and a cheque for $250.

So once again, congratulations to Cheryl on winning this prestigious award. Her on-going efforts have been an example to all of those involved in the library community in WA and we hope that she will display her trophy and boast of her achievements with well-deserved pride.

ALIA KISWA — Committee Nominations

ALIA KISWA (formerly Specials Librarians Section) is holding its next meeting on Tuesday, 9 July and is looking for members interested in nominating for committee positions.

There is plenty of support for new members who would like to become involved. We have a budget and provisional programme and some continuing committee members. Time, frequency and place of meetings are arranged between committee members.

To nominate for the committee, just contact Lisa Kidd, our Secretary (lisa.kidd@woodside.com.au) or any current Committee Member.

Call for nominations for ALIA WA Forum

To all Members of the ALIA WA Forum

Call for Nominations for Committee of Management Positions

We have been constituted as a group for a year as of July 2002. The ALIA WA Forum fills a strategic niche in the dissemination of professional information and communication in the Library and Information profession in WA. Feedback from members on their needs and the WA Forums relevance is welcome at any time.

New ideas and people are vital to remain relevant and up to date as a group. As a result WA Forum is now seeking members who are willing to participate more actively in the group. The WA Forum will require a new executive consisting of a Convenor/President, Deputy Convenor, Treasurer, Secretary, CDP Coordinator and Newsletter Editor as of July 2002. Members who are willing to participate in the CPD Committee and the preparation of the Newsletter are also required.

This call is prompted by the resignation of Trudy Parker as Treasurer. I would like to thank Trudy for her excellent work and for remaining committed to ALIA in this time of change. Trudy has successfully facilitated the change in money matters and helped WA Forum to move seamlessly into the new group environment. Her contribution is highly valued and she will be sorely missed.

If you wish the WA Forum to continue in the role of strategic communication and provision of CPD in WA you are urged to nominate for any of these positions in order to keep the group alive. We most especially require a Treasurer to fill Trudy's shoes.

Self-nomination can be made to members of the existing committee or the Local Presence Officer by Email. Should you wish to discuss nominations please feel free to Email members of the committee or call the Convenor, Bobbie Bruce on 0417 950 612.

I urge all ALIA WA Forum members to consider this call for nominations most seriously and to support the work of your existing committee with your willingness to participate and move the WA Forum forward into the future.

The Academic and Research Libraries Group (ARL-WA)

On Wednesday 8th May, the ARL group held a panel discussion titled

What is the future for Wireless Networks in Academic and Research Libraries?

Our guest speakers were Trevis Lawton and Matthew Turany

Trevis Lawton recently presented a paper at the VALA conference on Wireless networks in public libraries. He is currently a Web Services Analyst at the City of Joondalup. Trevis is an Internet pioneer in W.A., creating and managing an internet access consultancy company as early as 1993 and his services have been used at the WA Maritime Museum and New Norcia Benedictine Monastery. He recently started an e-business consultancy firm called "Illogical Solutions" and has been responsible for the creation of the online interlibrary loans system called "OILLS" that is being used by 120 public libraries in W.A.

Matthew Turany is Chief Technical Officer of Integrity Data Systems, a business partner of Winthrop IT technologies. Integrity Data Systems are responsible for the wireless networks in many local Perth schools, also at Monash University, Princess Margaret Hospital and Parliament House in Victoria.

An outline of the papers presented by Trevis and Matthew appears below.

Trevis Lawton

12-18 months ago the City of Joondalup was one of the only public libraries in the world to adopt a wireless website. The wireless website created a dynamic hook-up between the library system and a WAP (Wireless Application Protocol) site. Technologies such as the wireless website mean that libraries are now able to reach out beyond their walls, and provide highly personalised services that were never before feasible. At the City of Joondalup the "personalisation" of the library service has been approached in the following ways:

- Mass email marketing - the library service can now use profiles to target particular clients, such as all 12 year old males in a particular suburb who have said they're interested in youth events. Relevant information can be forwarded to these clients;
- New book alert service – Clients can go to the members' lounge, select up to three Dewey 1000 classifications, and then every week a customised email is sent notifying the client of new material;
- Online request service – this enables the user to request materials without having to step foot in the library. The barcode and PIN is used to authenticate the client.

At the City of Joondalup, the wireless services have been aimed at the mobile phone network, (this is not to be confused with WILAN (Wireless Local Area Networking). No special equipment or software is necessary if the organization is running a LAN based website.. Eight web pages were created, and the cost was $5000 dollars for staffing. As the information for these services is drawn from databases, there is very little ongoing work. The only real downsides to this service are the slow data transfer rates, and the cost of accessing the sites. In terms of costs, most clients are using GSM telephones, and access to the service is governed at a similar rate to mobile phone calls. Therefore information needs to be quick to get at and easy to interpret.

The jury is still out about wireless services. This technology is still in its embryonic phase. 80-90% of people are currently not using the facility, and a lot of this has to do with the current cost of the service. However, this is predicted to change as mobiles with GPRS technology increase in popularity. The costs for GPRS services will be packet based, with the only cost will being for connection. Essentially GPRS means you end up with a two line mobile phone, because you are able to receive and make voice calls while connected to the network. It will certainly be interesting to watch the developments at the City of Joondalup when GPRS technology reaches the masses.

Matthew Turany - Integrity Data Systems

Matthew discussed WILAN (Wireless Local Area Network) and some of the issues surrounding this new technology. Integrity Data Systems deals with Microwave technology for licensed microwave links (linking buildings together several km's apart), and WILAN technology.

WILAN consists of three basic units, a station (Network PC or laptop), a wireless card fitted to the computer, and base stations (access points) also known as portals. The portal is the bridge between a wired and wireless data signal, and functions in a similar way to a network hub or switch (networking). Through the use of software and hardware the wireless card converts data to a wireless signal.

There are various standards and consortiums that have been established that deal with WILAN technologies. Matthew outlined the various wireless standards and protocols.

The main advantage of WILAN is the mobility and flexibility it creates. All a client needs is a wireless card and the network configurations. However, there are some security issues. Matthew suggested “Bluesocket”, which acts like a firewall for a wireless network. Various access privileges can be assigned using bluesocket.

There are some important points to consider when choosing WILAN. Some of these points are

- Conduct a site survey – Make sure that a site survey is part of the installation process. Every site needs to be surveyed to identify limitations;
- WIFI certification – Different products using the same protocol may not be interoperable. The WECA (Wireless Ethernet Compatibility Alliance) tests all products before they are certified to ensure that the products are interoperable;
- Choose an experienced vendor – This is essential to ensure that the client is given the right advice, and support after the installation;
- Software compatibility – Not all software is WILAN, particularly those using up a lot of bandwidth.

CPD Column

If you are on AliaOBBL (the ALIA office bearer's list), you may have noticed in the report on the Board meeting of 23 May that Georgina Dale starts as Member Liaison Officer on July 15. Georgina's focus will be on ALIA groups and CPD. Some of you will have met Georgina at the National Policy Congress 2001 or at KISWA or WA Forum functions as she has been the Convenor of KISWA and was also on the LIW 2002 Committee. Georgina's email will be georgina.dale@alia.org.au.

In June we held a Professional Reading Group meeting to discuss the LISEKA Project. The aim of the project is to look at career long learning for information professionals and three models were suggested: 1) the status quo, 2) career long learning (update skills and knowledge continuously) and 3) practising professional program (advanced/specialised training in particular areas for practitioners). The consensus of the group was that the current model is preferred but with a significantly beefed up CPD component. The discussion at the meeting has been used in WA Forum's submission to ALIA. The Project Working Group's recommendations will be considered at the Board meeting in August.

Phil Teece will be visiting WA in mid-September and we are in the process of organising the WA Forum function. Further details will be released when we have finalised arrangements. Other groups will be organising their own event so it will be a busy week. September does seem to be particularly busy as the indexing courses have been moved to the beginning of September (please note the reduction in price), the South West seminar is on, Phil Teece will be visiting and the annual Copyright seminars will be here.

ALIA New Librarians' Symposium

ALIA's New Librarians' Symposium is to be held at the Carlton Crest Hotel Brisbane on Friday 6th and Saturday 7th December 2002. We are Library and Information Services students from Queensland University of Technology. Our aim is to promote and market this wonderful professional development opportunity to as many interested people as we can.

The symposium is a two-day seminar/workshop aimed at new librarians and information professionals in the Australia-Pacific Region. It is being organised by the ALIA Quorum group.

We would be pleased if you would advertise the symposium to Library and Information Services students and new employees. Your assistance in promoting the event will ensure that those most able to benefit from the symposium are aware of the fabulous opportunity to access top-quality professional development at an affordable price.

The symposium will be of greatest benefit to new and student librarians and information professionals in the first ten years (or so) of their careers.

Areas to be covered during the seminars/workshops include:

- Personal and Professional development
- Politics, Negotiation and Lobbying Skills
- Managing in the Future : technology and relationships.

Please visit our website at <http://www.alia.org.au/conferences/newlibrarian/> for extensive up-to-date information about the event.

An e-mail containing attachments for promotional posters, brochures and bookmarks will be forwarded separately. If your e-mail service does not accept attachments please contact the committee and we will organise to post out a copy of the material. We look forward to your support in promoting the ALIA New Librarians' Symposium.

Indexing Courses Endorsed by the Australian Society of Indexers!

Monday 2nd September	Book Indexing	9.30am – 4.30pm
Tuesday 3rd September	Database/Pictorial Indexing	9.30am – 4.30pm

Venue: Centre for Business Solutions
Training Room B312
140 Royal Street
EAST PERTH

Despite predictions that computers and search engines would make indexing obsolete, quality indexes are here to stay as readers, researchers, publishers, librarians and others admit that quality indexing adds context and integrity to a world otherwise populated by disorganised information. CAVAL Collaborative Solutions is happy to offer the following training courses for those responsible for the provision of indexes to assist locating information.

Indexing Books – an introduction

This back-of-book indexing workshop provides an introduction to the theory of indexing and the opportunity to apply this in practical exercises.

Authors, editors, indexers, librarians and technical writers who are responsible for providing quality indexes will benefit from this workshop.

Indexing Databases and Pictorial Materials

Most organisations devote time and energy to database building, and then neglect to provide enough assistance to find the resources. Pictorial materials, such as maps, photographs, charts, etc. comprise rich sources of information, but their non-textual (i.e. pictorial) nature, can make them particularly difficult to manage, store, and access.

This workshop provides the opportunity for those responsible for the management and access of databases and pictorial materials to learn and practice indexing fundamentals such as writing abstracts and selecting index terms.

All courses are developed and presented by Max McMaster who has been a freelance indexer for the past 9 years. Although he has mainly worked on back-of-book indexing, he is also highly experienced in database indexing, journal indexing and web-indexing. He arrived at indexing after spending 19 years in the library and information fields, mainly involved with scientific disciplines in State government departments and CSIRO. He has in excess of 900 indexes to his name. Max lectures on indexing to editing and publishing students at RMIT, and runs indexing training courses for the Australian Society of Indexers and others all around Australia. Max has been awarded the prestigious Australian Society of Indexers Medal on three occasions.

COST per day: $220.00 ($198.00 for CAVAL & ALIA Individual Members) includes lunch
