IT'S ALMOST SHOWTIME!

Want warm weather, clean city, great views to a beautiful river, some of the best beaches in the world and amazing wildflowers? Perth offers you a unique experience in Australia, so come along and experience some of the best in food, wine, entertainment and natural attractions.

Of course, what would a conference be without lots of opportunities for networking and socialising? The welcome drinks will be a great occasion to catch up with old friends, make new ones and enjoy fantastic WA food and wine. The first-timer's breakfast will help you to ease into the swing of things if this is your first conference - get in quick to reserve a place. Meet ALIA representatives at the ALIA Happy Hour. Dance the night away to a live band at the Spanish-themed conference dinner. There are some great prizes to be won and lots of opportunities to chat each day over coffees and lunches.

An exciting program with a diverse range of interesting and thought provoking speakers is planned. Well over a hundred abstracts were received, but we were only able to accommodate fifty-one of them in the program. In order to ensure that all proposals were treated equally, the Conference Program Committee set up a sub-group to assess the abstracts.

Following a process agreed by the Program Committee, all abstracts were read anonymously (double-blind) by at least two reviewers and scored against an evaluation template for clarity and coherence of expression, originality, interest and relevance to the conference, and the cogency of their conclusions. In addition, those abstracts which were identified as research focused rather than addressing questions of professional practice were assessed in terms of their aims and methodology, and their clarity in the presentation of results.

Abstracts which received high marks from two reviewers were automatically included. Those where the two reviewers' marks were significantly different were subject to a further review process and discussion among the group. Papers were assigned to the available slots in strict order of the marks received, though when choosing between abstracts which had received similar marks consideration was also given to the general area of the library and information profession to which they belonged – in this way an attempt was made to balance the interests of the special library, public library, academic library, and school library sectors.

The process as a whole provoked a good deal of lively discussion and decisions were not made lightly. Inevitably some people will have been disappointed – and as each abstract was considered strictly on its merits some people have ended up presenting two papers while others have unfortunately missed out. Nevertheless, while the abstract review process can always be refined, the work of the assessment sub-group has been central to ensuring a varied, substantial and inspiring program for the conference.

A range of library tours and satellite events have also been planned. Western Australian libraries are on show with great bus tours available before and after the conference. Alternatively choose a guided walk around the CBD and see a range of Perth's innovative libraries. Why not arrive early or stay a little later after the conference and attend a workshop or seminar. Several satellite events have been arranged to coincide with the conference. Full details are available on the website and bookings are essential to avoid disappointment.

See you all at the conference!

Editorial

Many thanks to Bonnie-Rae Bruce and Sharon Coppin for being editors of Biblia for the past two years. Bonnie and Sharon have been putting together Biblia in their 'spare time' after work, study, and family commitments and it is commendable that they have produced as many issues as they have.

We now need to replace two editors as well as find new committee members, a treasurer and secretary for ALIA West. As you may have noticed, ALIA West is not as active as it used to be. We have too few people on the committee to produce Biblia, run the F A Sharr medal and Special Librarian of the Year award, organise functions, and run the aliaWEST list. ALIA West is in crisis. We need several volunteers for the ALIA West committee and we need them now. (And preferably not the usual committee stalwarts who are eligible for a silver pin three times over and have multiple commitments besides their day job - I would like to see people who haven't been active in ALIA in the past take the opportunity to be involved and engaged in professional issues.)

If you want a state based ALIA group to continue, if you want Biblia to continue, if you want the F A Sharr medal and everything else that ALIA West does to continue, don't leave it to others to do something about it, volunteer now. We'd love to hear from you (Nadine.nadine.gibbons@defence.gov.au or Camille.ctpeters@myrealbox.com).

The Information Networker Program at Lake Joondalup Baptist College.

Felicity Stride and Stephen Sampson.

In May 2006 Stephen Sampson, Head Librarian at Lake Joondalup Baptist College, approached the WA Library Technicians Group requesting an experienced technician to attend his school for a discussion session with some students on the role of a 'real life' Library Technician. The call was put out for volunteers, and during the following week – which was coincidentally Library and Information Week – Wendy Morris and I attended Lake Joondalup Baptist College.

The students are part way through a Certificate II of Library Studies and had only had experience in their school library. The combination of my corporate law library role (Jackson McDonald), and Wendy's university (ECU Joondalup) role gave a broad range of experience and examples. We described our main duties, and how our role fits into our particular type and size of library. The students were attentive and responsive, asking questions and expressing interest in their course and the industry.

Afterwards we were given a tour of the school's library including the workrooms and were shown some examples of what the students do for their service time in the library.

Wendy and I both enjoyed visiting the students and were pleased that we could do something to help promote our industry to a younger audience. Plus, we got chocolate ;)

At the next WA Library Technicians meeting (15 June 2006) I gave a brief report to the group about our visit to LJBC. I was glad to hear that the rest of the Group was as interested as I was in hearing more about how Stephen Sampson started the course and whether we as a group could be of any future assistance to the school as the course develops.

I invited Stephen to write an article about how the course began and his plans for the students and the school (see below the line).

The ALIA mission statement reads:

“It seeks to empower the profession in the development, promotion and delivery of quality library and information services to the nation, through leadership, advocacy and mutual support”

I would like to compliment Stephen on his initiative to start this course, and thus his contribution to the development and promotion of the library industry. We wish him luck in the completion of this first 'guinea pig' course.

The impetus for the establishment of this program came from three main directions. For many years school libraries have had library monitors who were students who received informal training so that they could be given some responsibility to assist library staff with basic tasks. In recent times, however, Scotch College in Melbourne has developed a more formalised training program and came up with the name of Information Networker. Another development in high schools was the offering of lower level TAFE courses (mostly Certificate I and II) embedded as part of a TEE course or as a stand alone course. It was clear that when we interviewed prospective applicants for library clerical positions they often held no library qualifications. In addition, our college has been seeking to develop pathways for students to contribute to the well being of the school community through acts of service. Students who serve the school community extensively over a minimum of two years could be awarded College Colours for Service.

Our response to these circumstances was to integrate the Certificate II in Library/Information Services with training in the day-to-day operations of our modern school library. We adopted the name of Information Networker to replace the more dated term of library monitor. The Information Networker program was devised as a two year voluntary program which students would complete outside of class time. The two year program would mean that students would be expected to complete two units per semester and at the end of that time could also qualify for College Colours for Service. To be able to deliver and assess the Certificate II our teacher-librarians had to complete a Certificate IV in Training and Assessment. To be able to deliver such a course the college entered into an auspicing agreement with Central TAFE and as part of this agreement they provide the course material. With the exception of the unit Assist in Circulation Services, their course booklets can be used as is. Much of the course is hands on training and will include duties such as: issuing and returning loans, reference assistance, online searching, shelving, bibliography construction, ordering procedures and processing of information resources. The program is open to students in Years 9 – 11. The number of students that can take part in the program at this time is ten.

There are a number of benefits for those students who undertake and complete the program and these are as follows: development of information literacy skills; development of knowledge of the library and information services industry; development of information technology skills; development of customer service awareness; development of leadership skills in providing information service; completion of the nationally recognised Certificate II in Library and Information Services; extra points gained for TAFE entry; and the possibility of achieving College Colours for Service.

To be accepted into the program students must be committed and prepared to undertake the following: complete and submit the Information Networker application form; serve in two 30 minute time slots each week in the library in their own time; attend training workshops once a week; wear the Information Networker badge with pride; help out their fellow students in their various classes where they can provide practical assistance to the information needs of others; promote their role to the College community including at parent evenings; to serve for a minimum two year period to complete the Certificate II and to qualify for the time requirement for Service College Colours.

In recent times our Information Networkers have visited the various kinds of libraries which exist in our state. They have also been exposed to the important functions that library technicians perform within our profession. We were privileged to have Wendy Morris (ECU Joondalup) and Felicity Stride (Jackson McDonald Lawyers) visit us to run a discussion session on the role of library technicians. Our students were surprised by the diversity of tasks that library technicians can perform.

There are some other important benefits in running such a program as this. The profile of the library department has been lifted in the college community. Promotions through the college newsletter and assemblies have contributed to this end, as have Information Networkers acting as tour guides in the library on our annual college enrolment information evening. Once the Information Networkers become proficient in their duties, this will release our library clerical staff to tackle other tasks. For the teacher-librarians delivering the course it has provided opportunities to review library processes and procedures in detail. Finally, I hope that through such a program like this that we will attract student interest in our profession.

RAILS 2006

The RAILS seminar series is now well established. The first was a meeting of like research minds at the ALIA conference in Adelaide in 1996. Since then the seminars have blossomed with formal research seminars being held at Queensland University of Technology in 2004 and the most recent organised in 2005 by Charles Sturt University and held at the National Library of Australia.

The 2006 seminar will be held in conjunction with the ALIA 2006 CLICK06 conference.

RAILS 2006 will build on partnerships amongst educators, researchers and practitioners in library and information studies (LIS) to enable a culture of informed and innovative research practice. The theme of Linking Research With Practice, started at the 2005 seminar, will continue. New researchers, research students, research-active practitioners, recipients of research awards and research leaders are encouraged to use this opportunity to share their ideas and work with others.

Beyond the OPAC : future directions for Web-based catalogues

Monday 18th September, 2006

Invitation from Ebe Kartus, Chair, Australian Committee on Cataloguing

On behalf of the Australian Committee on Cataloguing (ACOC) I would like to invite you to the forthcoming ACOC seminar "Beyond the OPAC : future directions for Web-based catalogues". This full-day seminar will be ACOC's main professional development event for 2006 and will be of interest to all librarians and those responsible for the development of library catalogues and systems. It follows several very successful seminars in Sydney and Melbourne and again features a well known overseas speaker and a quality mix of Australian speakers.

The seminar will be held on the day prior to the commencement of the ALIA Click06 Conference and I hope that those of you who will be in Perth for the conference will consider coming a day early to attend the "Beyond the OPAC" seminar.

Program summary

Although online catalogues have migrated to the Web environment, their scope, functionality, and displays have undergone very little change in recent years. If OPACs do not evolve in order to meet the demands and expectations of the next generation of users, they run the risk of being bypassed for search engines like Google. Cataloguing rules and OPAC functionality should work together in harmony to bring about the best results for our users. However, in many cases OPAC functionality and design do not exploit the full potential of the catalogue record as created by the cataloguer. Conversely, cataloguing rules carry the legacy of previous manifestations of the catalogue – in particular the card catalogue - and are not always compatible with the online product. This seminar will explore the ideas and issues to take the Web-based catalogue into the next stages of its development.

The seminar will feature a keynote address by Dr Martha Yee from the UCLA Film and Television Archive. Martha will also provide a presentation on applying FRBR principles to library catalogues. Other speakers will discuss various aspects of OPAC development including alternatives to the OPAC.

Papers

Full text of papers and PowerPoint presentations from the Seminar will be provided where possible.

Venue

The seminar will be held at the Perth Convention Exhibition Centre, Mounts Bay Road, Perth, Western Australia.

Transforming Information and Learning Conference 2006 30 September 2006

Conference Overview

The theme for the 2nd Transforming Information and Learning Conference (TILC) is Making and Keeping Connections.

In a global knowledge economy dominated by the Web and online access, where information can be fluid, easily transformed and hidden, transparent connections between information agencies and repositories is essential. The overarching theme for the 2nd Transforming Information and Learning conference reflects the significant connections that exist between technology, information, information agencies, schools, libraries and learning.

The conference is a one day event with a pre-conference program running on Friday, 29 September 2006. Online registration is available on the web site. Register for TILC at <http://www.chs.ecu.edu.au/conference/TILC/registration.php>
