

Research/Academic: Academic (Teaching and Learning)

Competencies

1. Understand the structure of the Australian higher education system, especially as it impacts your organisation and users, with a focus on the research, data and publishing environment
2. Understand the vision and strategic direction of the university, research organisation or institution
3. Understand laws, regulations, codes, standards and policies applicable to teaching and learning
4. Understand the principles and practices related to information literacy and providing information services to meet users' needs
5. Understand the management of scholarly information resources in a wide range of formats, especially as used in the support of teaching and learning
6. Apply technology and systems to manage scholarly information resources, and support teaching and learning, with a special focus on educational technology trends and copyright
7. Identify, analyse and critically evaluate research resources across different disciplinary areas, including an understanding of the relevant research methods
8. Understand the discipline specific and specialised subject matter relevant to the university, research organisation or institution
9. Manage professional relationships with researchers, faculty, students and support staff, and communicate information and resources to a range of users

10. Maintain currency of professional knowledge and practice.