GLAM PEAK BODIES STATEMENT OF SUPPORT FOR TROVE

10 March, 2016: At their 25 February 2016 meeting at the Melbourne Museum, the GLAM Peak Bodies agreed to put their combined weight behind Trove as an essential component of the national research infrastructure.

Developed and implemented by the National Library of Australia, Trove is seen by the GLAM Peak Bodies as a platform that provides a robust national portal to the cultural riches of our galleries, libraries, archives, museums, historical societies. It supports digital collections from diverse organisations across Australia and is the nation's gateway to books, photographs, newspapers, maps, historical documents and ephemera.

The GLAM Peak Bodies acknowledge the vision and leadership of the National Library of Australia in collating one of the largest digital cultural collections in the world and a model that has led the way internationally. For researchers in the humanities and social sciences especially, it is a unique and highly valued resource. It equally enjoys strong community support throughout urban and regional Australia.

Since its release in 2010, Trove content has increased exponentially. There are now 471 million items in the digital collection, with more than 20 million unique users each year. This demonstrates the enormous appetite for cultural content to support education, research, industry, community and especially the arts and creative industries.

A consequence of the 2015 Mid-Year Economic and Fiscal Outlook Statement is that libraries, museums, archives, historical societies and smaller institutions across Australia will be unable to add their digital collections to Trove without paying. This will hamper the development of our world leading portal and will be a major obstacle to exposing the collections of smaller and regional institutions. Without additional funding, Trove will not fulfil its promise as the discovery site for all Australian cultural content.

The GLAM Peak Bodies urge the Australian Government to recognise Trove's role as the national platform for digital cultural collections from across the GLAM sector and to fund it accordingly.
